Project title:

Decolonizing Ontario's Provincial parks: Building relationships and aligning with First Nations conservation initiatives in the Mnidoo Gamii region (Georgian Bay)

What am I hoping to learn?

After working at Grundy Lake Provincial Park since 2017, I would like to learn how Ontario Parks can better engage local First Nations governance and align with community-led conservation initiatives.

What is this project about?

The goal of this research is to contribute towards decolonizing Ontario Provincial Parks by learning about First Nations-led conservation initiatives and opportunities for collaboration across the Mnidoo Gamii region. Through engagement with First Nations and conservation leaders in the region, this work aims to provide recommendations to Ontario Parks regarding:

- ways to improve alignment with community conservation initiatives;
- appropriate approaches for better engaging local Indigenous governance, and;
- opportunities to strengthen relationships with First Nations communities/organizations.

This project contributes to the Conservation Through Reconciliation Partnership:

Inviting contributions from First Nations leadership and conservation organizations

I hope to meet with First Nations leadership, lands managers, and conservation staff to learn about the conservation initiatives happening in the region, and how Ontario Parks can better align with and support Indigenous governance in traditional territories. Everyone involved in interviews will also be invited to review their contributions, provide feedback on results, and develop recommendations.
